Plastic Surgery SECRETS REVEALED

THE SURGICALLY ENHANCED TRUTH BEHIND
HOLLYWOOD'S MOST FAMOUS FACES

For every Hollywood celebrity who's admitted to going under the knife, there are dozens who have a Beverly Hills surgeon on speed dial. Hollywood has become deeply dependent on plastic surgery, more so than most people realize. "The smart stars start early, with very small procedures that contour and subtly reshape," a source tells OK!. "By the time they're in their late 30s and 40s, no one is the wiser. The public is convinced that the star never ages." Beyond the outspoken addicts (a la Heidi Montag), a widespread underground culture has driven even the most naturally beautiful stars to the operating room. "It's self-deception at its very worst," says clinical psychologist Dr. Patricia Farrell. "They are obsessed with youth and beauty and will do whatever it takes to achieve the look they seek. They fail to see that, at some point, it is obvious."

Kim, 33, has taken to her reality show, Keeping Up With the Kardashians, to reveal procedures she's had done (Botox, Fraxel skin-firming lasers) and one she hasn't: butt implants. But an inside source says that "while her butt is all hers, she did have the area between her rear and her thighs [worked on], so that she has definition there without working out. She had the tip of her nose shaved off years ago, and she's had numerous procedures done to flatten her stomach — two weeks after [giving birth] she started getting CoolSculpting to freeze the belly fat." And while Kim admitted on her blog that she plans to have a breast lift once she's done having kids, another insider reveals that she's already had them done. "She did some breast augmentation procedure, and I think she did it a second time as well," says the source. Dr. Douglas Taranow, a Board Certified Plastic Surgeon located in New York City, agrees that Kim's nose job, a procedure she's never admitted to, was likely. "Kim's nose is much thinner than in earlier photos, leading me to believe she has had it altered."
